Although Of Forgotten Dreams was conceived in a different time, with a different context, the written piece and accompanying images take on a new meaning in the world we find ourselves in during the global pandemic known as Covid-19 or Coronavirus.

This digital edition of the zine Of Forgotten Dreams is being made available at no charge, with the hope that it will bring you some pleasure during these difficult times.

Please look after yourself, your loved ones, and please stay safe. The future remains bright, if we will it. Please also support independent businesses where you can, as well as the filmmakers, photographers, authors, artists, and other creatives producing content in the hope of easing us through this pandemic, and who are, like many, struggling to make ends-meet.

Josh and Leanne.

This zine is a companion to the experimental film ‘Of Forgotten Dreams’, which forms part of a larger body of work entitled ‘Skirting the Edges’.

OF FORGOTTEN DREAMS
embedded in the words not spoken knowing in there
some where is gold buried amidst the waste
the hustle and bustle
the streaming streets
the blowing thoughts
street lights flicker
sparking fragments
of forgotten dreams
strange reacquaintances taken out of perspective colliding with the old, the new
a shower of giddiness outstretched hand grasping to hold a fleeting moment

i know it’s there
i almost had it
cut
take five
let’s try another take
maybe this time
to be may oh to may be
‘to be may’ by Leanne Staples
